

Maybe (Hamlet)

Darkness is setting the sun is disappearing no more laughing
all the crying begins

Is it right to stay behind where the people are the carnivores and feeling is just an anomaly

Is it right to leave with the beings crying out at night is no one safe here

Should I go, or should I stay Should I yell, or should I cry Should the days just pass me by

Should I scream and never hear it Should I die in this facade Should love just be obsolete

All this terror closing in on me screaming voices why couldn't I see it before

All these pounding headaches Every looming face behind that door my shoulder shows the truth

But I must not waiver my resolve must be strong to stand up against this foe